Hot Topics are essays on emergent areas of computer science, and can only be read in the online version of Computing Reviews. Each Hot Topic essay is written by an expert and focuses on an area with a potential high impact on computing. Mapping the background, current developments, and future evolution of a topic, the essay also provides a comprehensive context with links to labs, projects, workshops, and relevant items reviewed in Computing Reviews.

Written in a clear, direct style, Hot Topic essays don't require you to be an expert in the subject area. You can be part of the leading edge of computing developments by going to www.reviews.com, and clicking on Hot Topics in the top menu bar.
